MEDFORD, N.J., Jul 9, 2004 (BUSINESS WIRE) -- Information Today, Inc. (ITI) announced today the conference agenda and speaker lineup for the Streaming Media West conference and exhibition that will be held October 26-28, 2004 at the Santa Clara Convention Center in Santa Clara, California. Coming off a strong Streaming Media East show in New York in May, Streaming Media West will feature over 100 speakers along with an expanded exhibit hall. Attendees will hear first-hand tips, strategies, and practical advice that will help them put streaming and digital media technology to use in their own organizations.

The event, now in its seventh year, includes 20 individual round-table sessions covering business, technology, and content subjects surrounding digital media. The show also consists of four pre-conference workshops covering the creation, management, and distribution techniques of streaming as well as workshops on selecting and using today's encoding tools, implementing corporate communication applications and a beginner's workshop on Flash development. The West Coast show also features eight special "ROI case study presentations" from leading end-users who have adopted and implemented streaming and digital media technologies in multiple verticals.

The preliminary list of speakers includes industry executives and end users from such companies as Keynote Systems, Northwestern University, ESPN, BT Broadcast Services, Maven Networks, Harvard Business School, Bell Canada/Sympatico.MSN, Sonic Foundry, Turner Broadcasting, NASA Robotics Education Project, Apple Computer, RealNetworks, Live365, Macromedia, San Diego Union-Tribune, Daemen College, MSN TV Division, Ohio University, VBrick Systems, McGrawHill, CinemaNow, Movieflix.com, VitalStream, State Farm Insurance, Shaw Pittman LLP, Hughes Network Systems, Creative Artists Agency, Kontiki, University of Cincinnati, WebEx Communications, Shell IT International, Ben Waggoner Digital, and General Electric.

The full list of conference session subjects, descriptions, and participating speakers can be found online at www.streamingmedia.com/west.

The conference features keynote speakers who are industry practitioners and leading technology vendors sharing their implementation of streaming media technology in today's market.

On Wednesday Oct. 27, Chris Hock, director of product marketing for Macromedia, Inc., will showcase through industry examples the state of the art in video on the Web today. Additional keynotes will be announced shortly at www.streamingmedia.com/west.

In addition to the conference program, Streaming Media West includes a cutting-edge exhibit hall where attendees can explore new products and services firsthand. VectorMax is the Platinum Sponsor.
